

Mock digital humanities grant proposal

Working in a group of two to four students, write a mock grant proposal to expand the Central Rim Historical Survey digital project. Your proposal should take the project in a new direction and/or further develop existing aspects of it, all while remaining focused on the Central Rim (and, if relevant, adjoining neighborhoods).

Undergraduate students may respond to any existing grant program.¹ Grad students must write a proposal for the Digital Humanities Start-Up Grant Program administered by the National Endowment for the Humanities.²

Follow all the guidelines, with two exceptions: You can turn in a simple budget table instead of using the granting agency's template, and you can skip any letters of commitment and support.

Please include a copy of the grant guidelines/instructions with your proposal.

To merit an A grade, your grant proposal must be well researched, make a strong argument for the proposed project, and exhibit flawless prose.

Deadline: Monday, December 8

² Grad students: You can download the NEH grant guidelines and see sample grant proposals at <http://www.neh.gov/grants/odh/digital-humanities-start-grants>.
